Research Interests:

Dr Weissmann's research focuses on Security, Strategy, and Intelligence, structured around the following six core themes:

1. Hybrid Threats
2. Resilience and Psychological Defence
3. Strategic Intelligence
4. Technology and Defence
5. Modern Warfare
6. China and the Indo-Pacific

He also maintains a strong interest in Teaching and Learning in Professional Military Education (PME) — particularly in practical, scenario-based instruction, such as staff rides and wargames.

Current Research Areas

He is currently pursuing projects in the following areas:

- Hybrid Threats and Whole-of-Society Defence — with emphasis on foreign influence and interference.
- Psychological Defence — focusing on resilience-building and cognitive security.
- Strategic Intelligence — especially the roles of AI and the private sector in strategic early warning and intelligence dissemination.
- Technology and Defence — including military innovation, AI, and autonomous systems.
- Russian Warfare and Influence — with regional focus on Ukraine, the Balkans, and Central Asia.
- Military Operations and Tactics — particularly urban warfare and the role of emerging technologies.
- China's Foreign Policy and Global Role — including its influence in Ukraine, the Middle East, the Global South, and under a potential second Trump administration.
- Security and Strategy in the Indo-Pacific.
- Foreign Influence and Local Adaptation — examining post-colonial states under great-power competition, especially in Central Asia and the Middle Corridor.
- Teaching and Learning in PME — emphasising staff rides, wargaming, and scenario-based educational models.
